War Summary of The Latest Events

The sober words of Sir William Robertson, British Chief of Staff, should steady those who in the success of the Somme offensive see the beginning of the end and predict that the end will not be long delayed. Sir William, in calling for the release from industrial occupation of every man who can be spared and who is eligible for military service, said: "We must be under no delusion as to the end or probable duration of this great struggle. We must be prepared to continue for a time which cannot at present be estimated. In fact, we must prepare for the worst while we hope for the best." These words of warning against relaxation of efforts are addressed to the people of the United Kingdom. It is necessary that they shall be heeded in Canada also, for among us are many who believe that a final and complete victory can be attained with little further effort.

The news from Macedonia is good. General Sarriol reports that in the Valley of the Cerna "the French, Serbian and Russian forces are continuing victoriously their advance." Following up their victory on the crests of Kaimakalan the Serbs descended the western slopes of the Woglena range, took the village of Pisoderi, in the loop of the Cerna, and advanced upon the mountains that lie between the Kaimakalan range and Monastir. They have now recaptured 230 square kilometers of Serbian territory, including seven towns. In the valley north of Florina and in the mountains west of Monastir the French and Russians continue to press forward. The result of the movement to encircle Monastir is now practically assured.

At the other end of the long Macedonian front the British who crossed the Struma and took Jenikoi, have been subjected to three serious counter-attacks by the Bulgars. They were all repulsed with very heavy losses to the enemy. The Bulgars seem to be poorly provided with artillery to answer the British fire.

Almost before the ink was dry on von Falkenhayn's grandiloquent proclamation telling how he had "as good as annihilated" in the Red Tower Pass, on the southern frontier of Transylvania, "a numerically superior enemy," the remnants of which he represented as "still careering about the mountains," the Roumanians dealt the boaster another shrewd blow. It is officially announced by

On all the fronts the British have lost 307,169 in killed, wounded and missing in three months including 17,24 officers. This includes the period of the great Somme offensive and the major part of losses were sustained there. The casualties averaged 1,925 per day in July, 4,127 in August and 3,985 in September.

er Pass, on the southern frontier of Transylvania, "a numerically superior enemy," the remnants of which he represented as "still careering about the mountains," the Roumanians dealt the boaster another shrewd blow. It is officially announced by the War Office at Bucharest that 14 officers and 1,228 men have been captured in the fighting in the Ghurgill Mountains, that to the northwest of Fogaras German and Austrian troops were defeated and 800 Germans captured, and that on the southern front in the Dobrudja, despite the stubborn resistance of the enemy and the violent fire of his heavy artillery, the Roumanians attack continues to make progress in the centre. On the left a position was captured at Amzecea, together with 1,000 men, seven guns, and much war material. The captures of the day aggregate over 3,000 men. Falkenhayn's silly proclamation celebrated the capture of 4,000.

Berlin announces that the Roumanian troops which crossed the Danube south of Bucharest withdrew in hasty flight before an encircling attack directed by von Mackensen. The important thing is that they got away. Bucharest announces the withdrawal of Roumanian troops from Petroseny, the coal mining centre, to the north of the Vulcan Pass, in Western Transylvania, before violent attacks. The coal mines were wrecked by the Roumanians prior to their evacuation, and will not be of use to the Teutons until new machinery is brought up to unwater them. Altogether Roumania is keeping two of Germany's best Generals and a lot of her troops very busy.

The fighting west of Lutsk and near Brzezany, on the Ziota Lipa, between the Slavs and Teutons has reached a degree of intensity that has seldom been exceeded since the war began. Official reports from Berlin state that not a foot of ground was lost by the Teutons on the Volhynian front, and that the Russian dead in front of their lines number thousands. Brusiloff's men seem to have had better success on the Ziota Lipa. Petrograd despatches announce that they have captured the heights east of Brzezany, held stubbornly by the Austro-Germans during a three-day battle. Their artillery now dominates the town and the Teuton camps.

There was relatively little activity on the British front on the Somme after the capture of the remaining houses in Eaucourt by the British in a night attack on Tuesday. Wednesday the German artillery was very active all along the Ancre and around Eaucourt and Gueudecourt. In this region the enemy attempted a bombing attack, but without success, and retired, leaving many wounded outside the British lines.

On the French front no important events took place during the day. The infantry made progress east of Morval. Rain still delays the operations.

Rev. L. O. Walker of the Tyendinaga reserve church met with a rather serious accident on Saturday while driving up Main street, Deseronto. Nearing Mill street his horse, a rather fiery steed, took fright at a locomotive and in its frantic prancing a portion of the harness gave away and the animal ran away, throwing Mr. Walker out of the buggy and rendering him quite lame. His knee cap received a severe blow and his arm was also badly twisted besides other minor soars.

L. B. LUCAS,
Attorney-General.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, the Most Hon. the Marquis of Lansdowne, Agent of the British Red Cross, has, on behalf of that organization and the Order of St. John, urgent appeal throughout the world for individual contributions to be collected on Thursday, day of October, A. D. 1916, and to be devoted entirely to the sufferings of our wounded and sailors from home and at the various seats of war;

AND WHEREAS, Our Province of Ontario, one of the richest in the Overseas Dominions, has manifested its desire to do its part in the great struggle in which the Empire is now engaged by contributions of both men and money;

AND WHEREAS the British Cross Society and Order of St. John have not only cared for the wounded sailors and soldiers parts of Our Empire, but have extended their humane work in caring for the suffering Allied Nation;

AND WHEREAS the Canadian Ambulances, Hospital Train, and Medical Supplies for thousands of our men in Europe, Asia and Africa, great that all parts of the Empire are called upon to assist in this meeting it;

WE, THEREFORE, APPEAL FIDELITY to Our People of the Province to make such a contribution as will be worthy of the place of Ontario in Our Empire, worth the Province and worthy of the cause for which the appeal is made;

AND, FURTHERMORE, HEREBY REQUEST that every town and city and every municipality will co-operate immediately with the Patriotic Cross organizations in his country and with such other organizations and societies as he may see fit to call a public meeting in every locality for the purpose of organizing a campaign for the collection of funds on the nineteenth day of October, with the object above mentioned.

WE, THEREFORE, URGE the clergymen in the Province to call this matter before their congregations at the first opportunity and press upon them the need for prompt and liberal action; ALSO APPEAL to Member of Parliament, Members of the Legislative Assembly, school teachers and public generally to co-operate in the movement and assist in bringing matter to the attention of the public and in every other way to secure a successful accomplishment.

ALL OF WHICH PRESENTS Our loving subjects and to whom it doth or may in any way concern are hereby required to give aid and govern themselves accordingly;

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF we have caused these OUR LET to be made PATENT and the SEAL OF OUR PROVINCE to be hereunto affixed.

HAVE YOU PAID YOUR TAXES?

To The Editor,—

Sir,—The tax payer of Napanee, up to Monday night last, paid in on account of this year's taxes, to the collector, $36,400.00, which was nearly three-quarters of the total taxes for the year. It is very satisfactory to the members of the town council and myself to find that the tax payers are treating the town affairs as a business proposition and seconding
the efforts of the town council to place the financial affairs of the town on a solid basis.

This represents more taxes paid in,
in about fifteen or sixteen days this year, than was paid in last year up to the close of the business year, which is December 14th.

The ratepayers who own property,
butting upon streets which have been watered by the town, during the summer months, will be billed at once,
this year with a further tax bill which represents three years cost of street
sprinkling of the town of Napanee, including 1916. The rate per year for street sprinkling, which is only chargeable against properties receiving the benefit thereof, is 2.22c nearly 2½c per foot frontage per year.

This includes the annual payment of $177.97 for five years to pay for the new street sprinklers purchased in 1913 from the Sawyer-Massey Company. One payment was made last November on this debenture, second payment will be made on the 15th of November next, and three subsequent payments will be made annually on the years 1917, 1918, and 1919. These payments include principal and interest on the debenture.

To make the position of street
watering clearer I will say that there has been a delay in getting out the street watering roll owing to the fact that the law was changed three years ago and the town had previously paid for the street watering by adding one mill on the assessed value of properties abutting upon streets watered. This is now illegal and the law required that the cost of street watering should be assessed on a frontage at so much per foot, not considering the assessed values of the properties, so that vacant lots pay
the same assessment for street watering as business properties, and this involved a very large amount of extra special labor to adjust in the clerk's office.

This year an ordinary 66 foot frontage lot at 6.66 per foot will pay for three years watering 4.39 and hereafter pay for street watering $1.46, a half lot paying half this amount, and a quarter lot paying a quarter of this amount. The parliament has come to the conclusion that this dis-

BRITISH RED CROSS APPEAL

The Lieut. Governor, of the Province of Ontario, has issued a pro-clamnation appointing the 19th day of October 1916, as a day for collecting money throughout the Province in aid of the British Red Cross Society and Order of Saint John, which order has not only cared for the sick and wounded sailors and soldiers from all parts of our Empire but also have extended humane work to assist in caring for the suffering of every Allied Nation.

The proclamation urges and requests that the Mayor of every town and city and the reeve of every municipality should take steps at once to organize all Patriotic and Red Cross Organizations in his community for a campaign to collect funds on the 19th day of October for the above mentioned object. Letters having been received by our Mayor urging immediate action, the Town Council on Monday
 last referred the matter to the Finance Committee, which committee so successfully carried on a similar campaign
 last year and authorizing the said committee to take steps at once to organize for the 19th.

The Town of Napanee, last year contributed from womens organizations
 $56.50 and through general collection $1814.94 or a total of $1871.44. The demand is greater than ever this year and especially as there are so many of the Canadian troops now being taken care of by the British Red Cross Association. You are urged therefore to make ready your contributions and make them as large as possible this year to help on this good cause. Further notice will be given of the Organization which will be perfected at once.

of Ontario, at Our Government House in Our City of Toronto in Our said Province, this twenty-first day of September, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixteen and in the seventh year of Our Reign.

By command:
 W. J. HANNA,
 Provincial Secretary.

N. B.—The County Clerk suggests that Municipal Councils send their grants to the treasurer of the Lennox and Addington Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Mr. W. J. Shannon, County Treasurer, and that all other contributions be sent to the Red Cross or the I.O.D.E., Napanee—all to be forwarded to the Provincial Treasurer, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. We should not do less than last year, as the need is greater.

HOLDING NEW GROUND

British Are Fighting For Recently Won Territory.

Germans Have Recovered a Footing in Some of the Buildings at Eaucourt, but at Other Points British Positions Are Improved—Haig's Troops Now Straddle Bapaume Road.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—On the front in France the Germans at Eaucourt l'Abbaye in fierce fighting regained a footing in some of the buildings of that town, but west of Gueudecourt and east of Courcelette the British improved their positions.

They demolished the German trenches on a front of a mile and three-quarters, stretching from a point east of Eaucourt l'Abbaye to the Albert-Bapaume road. The village of Eaucourt l'Abbaye is reported in their hands, according to news reaching Gen. Haig at headquarters.

The new blow was carried out after a tremendous artillery bombardment, the attacking troops being closely followed by the terrible "tanks," which cleaned out the German trenches by an enfilading fire while the infantry swept forward. More than 300 prisoners had been brought in at a late hour Sunday night, making a total of almost 30,000 on the British front alone since the beginning of the Somme operations. A division of the new army took part in the fighting, and showed steadiness and endurance.

Sunday's stroke followed a night of activity along the two-mile line between Fliers and Le Sars. The British made progress here, while the French, in small engagements, pressed forward somewhat north of Rancourt and south-east of Morval and Clay, where they are striking at Saillissel.

On the British left in the Thiepval area further progress in desperate trench fighting around the Stuff and Schwaben redoubts has been made.

The Germans, apparently in an effort to create a diversion and lighten the pressure on their Somme armies Sunday delivered a series of attacks against the French front in the Tahure district. The French fire rendered the attacks fruitless.

Sir Douglas Haig reports: "Since Sept. 18 we have taken between the Ancre and the Somme 24 field guns, 3 field howitzers, and 3 heavy howitzers.

"From July 1 to Sept. 30 in the same area we made prisoner 588 officers and 26,147 other ranks."

STATE-OWNED LINERS.

Government Is Planning a Transatlantic Steamer Service.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—Among the questions which will be dealt with by the Government after the war will be that of the establishment of a State-owned line of trans-Atlantic steamers. It is understood that but for the war a project of this nature would have been considered and action taken. As things are now it must wait for the restoration of normal conditions. A State-owned steamship service between Great Britain and Halifax would realize in part at least the advantages of an all-ied line. It would consist of a Russians Again In Full Sweep Towards Lemberg.

Berlin Admits Gains of Attacking Forces Which Have Endeavored to Offset Von Hindenburg's Contemplated Offensive—Four Thousand Prisoners Have Been Captured by the Russians.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.—The fighting along the south-western front has reached another of its periodic climaxes, which has turned in favor of the Russians, yielding them a large number of prisoners, and has again threatened Lemberg from two important directions—along the main railway from Brody to Lemberg and from Brzezany.

The two main actions are being waged in the region of the Brody-Krasne railway, about 30 miles north-east of Lemberg, and in the Brzezany sector of the Zlota Lipa River, 50 miles south-east of the city.

In the former district the Russians have pressed forward against heavy resistance, taking about 2,000 prisoners. A Teuton position on the right bank of the Zlota Lipa was carried on the south-eastern sector of the advance.

This new stroke of General Brusiloff is believed to have been made to forestall the offensive contemplated by Field Marshal von Hindenburg. It puts the Teutons upon a strict defensive in the eastern theatre, following close upon the heels of tentative attacks by them which are believed to have been the first movements of the contemplated advance. The Russian official statement says:

"In the neighborhood of the Brody-Krasne railway and to the southward, our troops, by heavy fighting are forcing their way forward, the enemy stubbornly resisting the advance. We have captured here 59 officers and 1,928 men of the rank and file.

"The fighting is turning to our favor to the south of Brzezany, on the River Tseniuvka, and in the region of the heights on the right bank of the Zlota Lipa. Here we captured part of the enemy position by assault, taking 112 officers and 2,263 of the rank and file as well as some machine guns. Enemy counter-attacks during Saturday night were frustrated by our fire."

FOURTH ZEPPELIN DESTROYED.

Another Monster Falls Victim to English Aircraft Defences.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Another Zeppelin was shot down in flames during a raid, which is still in progress, at an early hour this morning. The first report, issued by Field Marshal Sir John French, commanding the home forces, says:

"A number of hostile airships crossed the east coast, between 9 o'clock (Sunday) and midnight. A few bombs were dropped near the coast. No damage has yet been reported. The raid is still in progress. Some airships are in the vicinity of London, where some guns have been in action. An airship is just reported brought down in flames north of London."

Deliver Counter-Stroke.
Oct. 3.—Brief announcements from both Bucharest and Berlin state that Roumanians had crossed the south of their capital and Bulgaria was the only important move in that reach here Monday night. Papers, however, hail the move as a dramatic counter-attack against the Bulgarians for the Roumanians suffered no defeat.

It is said that the Roumanians are against the Roumanian case, the crossing the rear of Field Marshal von Rennen's force in Dobrudja.

Norwegian Ships Sunk.

OSLO, Norway, Oct. 3.—A submarine has made its first voyage in the Arctic Ocean and has sunk three Norwegian steamships. The ships were the Arne, Arne and Rolf Jarl. The ships were sunk by the submarine. Steamship traffic in the Arctic route covering the Norwegian towns has been suspended. Since August the Germans have sunk Norwegian boats valued at $1,000,000. The loss of the German submarines probably is to increase the transportation of goods to Russia by way of the Sea ports.

Man Killed in Last Raid.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—An official report says: "Possibly the total casualties from the raid were killed and a woman injured. The damage was insignificant although the raiders covered the area and dropped a great many bombs, only four houses were damaged and some glass windows were broken."

Needn't Go Higher.

A young master, who had been a pupil with contemptuousness as to his want of skill in the pencil, ended by saying: "I were to draw me, for example, what part you would draw?"

He, with a significant meaning, looked up into his master's eyes and quietly said: "Thank you, sir."—London Tit-Bits.

must be restored to the restoration of normal conditions. A State-owned steamship service between Great Britain and Halifax would realize in part at least the advantages of an all-red line. It would consist of a fleet of fast, well-equipped vessels with ample capacity for passengers, cargo and mails, providing an uninterrupted service all the year round. It would be an important and perhaps necessary complement to the great railway system already in operation by the Government, and which may be found in the near future stretching from coast to coast. The railway system and the steamship service would thus provide business for each other. The project is, as we already stated, not for immediate consideration. It will present itself when peace is restored and when the energies of the Government and resources of the country are no longer fully employed in the prosecution of the war.

There are indications that when the time comes the proposal will find very strong support among members of the Government.

Plea for Quebec to Send Soldiers.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—"The war is not finished. One million more men are asked. Let it not be said that the province of Quebec remains behind. In the name of everything precious to us, in the name of everything that we must preserve for the future, I pray my compatriots, those who can bear arms, those who have no families, to enlist in the regiments actually in formation."

In these words Hon. Thos. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster—General of Canada, concluded an address to the Liberal-Conservative Association of this city at a luncheon tendered to him on Saturday afternoon. He deprecated the sowing of seeds of dissension in Ontario against the people of this province.

Hon. Mr. Casgrain said the time had not yet come to answer these attacks made against the Government.

Fire in Liner's Cargo.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Fire, which broke out in the cargo hold of the American Line Steamship Philadelphia while the vessel was approximately 800 miles from this port was still smoldering under a blanket of steam when she arrived here Sunday. So successful were the officers and crew in keeping the news from 646 passengers that few were aware of the peril they had been in until the big liner had been docked. At the first intimation of fire, officers removed the steerage passengers and took precautions to keep the news from spreading to the first and second cabin passengers.

The Philadelphia left Liverpool Saturday, Sept. 23. How the fire started, it was said, has not been determined. Among the passengers was Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the English actor.

London, where some guns have been in action. An airship is just reported brought down in flames north of London.

Advices from the suburbs of London give graphic accounts of the manner in which the Zeppelin—the fourth to be brought down on English soil—fell a victim to Great Britain's anti-aircraft defences.

Although the Zeppelin crashed to earth almost due north of London the spectacle of the descending blazing mass was witnessed by thousands of Londoners, who showed their satisfaction by loud cheering.

The Zeppelin began to descend slowly, and then dropped very fast, the blaze from it lighting up the countryside for many miles like day.

The military critic of the Frankfurter Zeitung says conditions for Zeppelin attacks on England are much more difficult than even a year ago. The British, he says, have had time to carry their defence measures to the highest perfection.

Train Crashes Into Street Car.

DETROIT, Oct. 3.—Thirteen persons were killed and more than 28 injured, several probably fatally, late Sunday night when a switch engine pushing two freight cars crashed into a crowded street car at Forest avenue and Dequinder streets, on the East side. There were more than 90 persons in the street car, many of them returning from the theatres.

The street car was struck almost in the centre, the impact pushing it from the tracks and sliding it alongside of the freight cars.

Panic-stricken passengers began jumping from both the front and rear doors and climbing through windows. Most of the dead were killed by jumping from the car and falling under the wheels of the still-moving freight cars.

The railroad tracks at Dequinder street are used by the Grand Trunk and Detroit Terminal Railroad Companies.

Posed as Niece of Sir Sam.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Dorothy Langish, daughter of a county gardener, who posed in London as the niece of Sir Sam Hughes, and who became known at several big hotels as Little Miss Canada, through her popularity with the young officers, has been sentenced to two months in jail for stealing jewelry.

Italian Steamer Sunk.

MARSEILLES, via London, Oct. 2.—The Italian steamer Enrico Millo has been sunk in the Mediterranean in a collision with a French steamer. Part of the crew of the Enrico Millo was saved. The vessel measured 3,542 tons and was bound from New York to Genoa.

Eggs and Onions.

If less meat, shall we eat superboiled eggs after the manner of the Albanians? It testifies to the strength of their digestions. An equal number of eggs and onions are boiled together for about three hours daily on ten successive days, the eggs being slightly pricked after each boil so that the juice of the onions thoroughly permeates them.

They are naturally as hard as bullets at the end of this treatment, but an Albanian will bolt down a huge plateful, helped down by lashings of olive oil, and then clamor for a second helping.—London Chronicle.

Chinese Building Railways.

PEKIN, Oct. 3.—The Chinese Government has concluded an agreement with the Siemens-Carey Co. of St. Paul, Minn., for the construction of more than 2,000 miles of railways. The probable cost of this work will be over $100,000,000, and construction will begin immediately.

Great Britain will probably debar live cattle from Canada.

Real Academic Dignity.

Max Muller tells a story of one of Dr. Strachan Davidson's predecessors as master of Balliol. "Once when returning from a solitary walk Dr. Jenkins, whose regard for his own dignity was very great, slipped and fell. Two undergraduates, seeing the accident, ran to assist him and were just laying hands on him to lift him up when he described a master of arts coming. 'Stop!' he cried. 'I see a master of arts coming down the street,' and he dismissed the undergraduates, with many thanks, and was helped on his legs by the M. A."—London Chronicle.

TRAPPED BY HIS BLIND RAGE.

For Stupid Obstinacy a Himalayan Bear Takes the Prize.

"Most wild animals are stupid as well as greedy, but for sheer brainless obstinacy in the face of opposition," writes Prince Sarath Ghosh in his book, "The Wonders of the Jungle," "there is no animal like the Himalayan bear. If he finds a thing in his way he will always push it aside, if he can, even though it would be easier to go round the obstacle.

"The wily natives of India have observed that trait in his character and from it have contrived a trap to catch him. They select a tree with a suitable horizontal bough. At a point on the bough about ten or twelve feet from the fork they fasten a bait likely to attract the bear—honey, for example, or goat's flesh. Then from another bough above that one they suspend a heavy block of stone. The rope is so attached to the upper bough that the stone hangs between the bait and the fork of the tree.

"The bear scents the bait from a distance, comes to the tree, sees the food on the bough and climbs up the trunk of the tree. Reaching the bough, he walks along it to get at the bait. But suddenly he notices the obstacle in the way and pushes it aside with his paw. The stone swings out of the way for a second, then it swings back and hits the bear on the paw. With a growl of irritation the bear pushes it aside more violently. The stone swings away again; then it returns with greater force and hits the bear on the chest.

"With a snarl of rage the bear gives the stone a tremendous thrust and sends it up into the air in a wide curve. Then down comes the stone in a similar curve and hits the bear a thumping whack on the ribs.

"Most animals would desist after that third blow; not so the bear. He is now in a perfectly mad rage, and a bear is a good boxer. He hits out with his paws right and left and sends the stone hurtling forward in a still wider curve. Then after a few seconds the stone comes back and hits the bear a terrific 'uppercut' on the jaw.

"The bear is roused to white hot fury. He thinks an enemy is hiding behind the stone—as an enemy might do in the jungle—and he is determined to reach that enemy.

- "But, alas, the bear never went to school and learned the law of gravity! Every blow he hits the stone is returned tenfold. And as the stone has no brains to be knocked out it is the bear that gets knocked out at last. He will never, never give in until he is knocked out—of the tree.

"Then the wily natives hiding below rush in with a net and throw it quickly over him.

"And that is how many menageries and zoos get their Himalayan bear."

Why Not a Garden Pool?

As to the garden pool—why not have one? It may be ever so simply done, and often the more simple it is the more charming. Or it may be very elaborate and artificial, like those in the tiny toy gardens of those masters of artifice, the Japanese. No other garden feature offers greater possibilities for diversity of form or for originality than the pool. I know a

HISTORY AS IT IS TAUGHT.

A Plea For Really Neutral Textbooks In Every Country.

History in every country is so taught as to magnify that country. Children learn to believe that their own country has been always in the right and almost always victorious, that it has produced almost all the great men and that it is in all respects superior to all other countries. Since these beliefs are flattering they are easily absorbed and hardly ever dislodged from instinct by later knowledge.

To take a simple and almost trivial example: The facts about the battle of Waterloo are known in great detail and with minute accuracy, but the facts as taught in elementary schools will be widely different in England, France and Germany. The ordinary English boy imagines that the Prussians played hardly any part; the ordinary German boy imagines that Wellington was practically defeated when the day was retrieved by Blücher's gallantry. If the facts were taught accurately in both countries national pride would not be fostered to the same extent, neither nation would feel so certain of victory in the event of war and the willingness to fight would be diminished.

It is this result which has to be prevented. Every state wishes to foster national pride and is conscious that this cannot be done by unbiased history.

The defenseless children are taught by distortions and suppressions and suggestions. The false ideas as to the history of the world which are taught in the various countries are of a kind which fosters strife and serves to keep alive a bigoted nationalism.

If good relations between states were desired one of the first steps ought to be to submit all teaching of history to an international commission which should produce neutral textbooks free from the patriotic bias which is now demanded everywhere.—Bertrand Russell in Atlantic Monthly.

SCENIC BEAUTY OF ALASKA.

A Grand Panorama That Reaches Its Climax In Mount McKinley.

A careful reading of literature pertaining to Alaska prepared me in part for what the journey was bound to disclose, but seeing is the only sense that can give knowledge and secure appreciation of the grandeur, the sublimity, the fascinating beauty of mountain, sea, stream, fjord, falls, islands, forests, cloud and the glorious color effects which the dazzling rays of the sun bring into existence. In connection with all these is a land of enchantment for all who love and can appreciate nature.

Cook inlet, with its arms and reaches, has many bewildering channels, resulting from the numerous rugged islands. The forbidding and embattled shores rising into lofty mountains and at present swathed in white almost to the water's edge possess a virility, a grandeur and sublimity which require the most poetic imagination and most facile pen even faintly to portray. The grand panorama reaches its climax in Mount McKinley, monarch of the North American continent. With its

FLYING BULLETS.

Forces That Control the Curve They Take to Reach the Ground.

The trajectory of a rifle is the curve which the bullet describes in traveling from the muzzle of the rifle to its mark at a given range. This curve is the component of two forces—first, the momentum imparted to the bullet in the rifle barrel and, second, the downward pull of gravitation. Many persons have the erroneous idea that so long as a body is traveling ahead very fast it will not drop.

The fallacy of this notion can be very prettily shown by a laboratory experiment in which two rubber balls of the same size and weight are projected from a miniature catapult at precisely the same instant, but in such a way that ball A has double the velocity of ball B. Although ball A will travel twice as far as ball B before it strikes the floor, it will always be observed that the two balls strike the floor at the same instant.

High velocity, then, does not free a rifle bullet from the effect of gravity, but it does enable it to travel a greater distance ahead before it has had time to fall any given distance. That is the true reason why high velocity tends to give a low trajectory. For comparison of cartridges the height of the trajectory at midrange is generally taken as the standard.—Outing.

APACHES OF PARIS.

Strife Over an Underworld Beauty Led to Their Undoing.

The apaches of Paris are an order of the lowest and most dangerous criminals in the world. There is not a great central organization like the Italian orders and no fixed rules or assemblies. It consists merely of groups of crooks operating in different quarters of the city. These little groups or circles take their names from the quarter of the city that they inhabit and have their own conventional signs, places of meeting, leaders and the like. The members are usually young, beginning as boys of ten or fifteen years.

The women associated with these criminal bands are called marmites in the vernacular of the underworld. There was a struggle in Paris between the apache bands of Manda and Lecca, involving, like the Iliad, the abduction of a Helen. She was a famous beauty in the subterranean cafes of Paris and called, in the argot of Montmartre, La Casque d'Or. The very name has the ring of romance. She was betrothed to the leader of the Manda and was carried off by the rival band of Lecca. War followed between the bands—a bitter, vindictive, bloody feud.

This contest destroyed the apache ascendancy in Paris.—Melville D. Post Threatened the King.

The honor of knighthood is not one which appeals to everybody. Coke of Norfolk, who considered that he had a far better claim than the speaker to the designation of first commoner of England, strongly disliked the idea of a handle to his name. This fact was well known to George IV. When Coke was chosen to head a deputation praying the king to dismiss from his per-

PULP FOR PAPE

It Is Now Mainly Obtained From
and Vegetable Fibers

Paper derives its name from that it was originally made by the Egyptians from papyrus, a plant formerly common in Egypt along the Nile. Today paper is largely made from vegetable fibers and cellulose.

When it was found that of the cotton and flax plants adapted for making paper uses of paper were few there did a flourishing business in old rags to keep the paper makers supplied with raw material. The rags were first allowed to remove the substances increasing cellulose and were then beaten into pulp to which water was added. The pulp was then placed in a machine and drained and subjected to heat to insure which united the fibers into paper. By the modern method the rags are boiled with caustic soda which separates the cellulose from the lignin and placed in a machine in which rollers set with knives tear the paper into pieces and mix them with water to make a pulp. This pulp is mixed with chloride of lime and alum and a kind of soap to give it a smooth surface.

The way man's discovery to supply his needs in the pre-civilization is notably illustrated by the production of paper. Under the primitive method the big supply required for newspapers and other publications has not been produced.

The discovery that pulp made from the trunks and trees came to the rescue. It was that by boiling wood shavings in strong solutions of caustic alkalis in receptacles that would withstand high pressure the wood chips were separated and a very good cellulose for paper manufactured. As a result of this process paper today is mostly made from wood.

These twelve words contain 200 letters, and the telegram has two periods, two apostrophes, and a hyphen to make it proper English. It does not contain the long word "proanthropologically," either.

How Portuguese Entered

Portuguese Africa was a result of the long efforts to discover and maintain a maritime route to the East independent of the services of the Arabs and Moors as commercial intermediaries. This was the prime motive of Prince Henry the Navigator, of Vasco da Gama and of the other Portuguese explorers and navigators. The Portuguese empire was built east and west, the colonization of Africa, the conquest of Mexico of artifice, the Japanese. No other garden feature offers greater possibilities for diversity of form or for originality than the pool. I know a city garden with high walls about it, rather a cramped garden because of the nearness of other dwellings. But under a small tree in that garden is a bit of a basin with water that is always fresh, set there in the sod to invite the birds for a daily bath. And where birds are there is the spirit of the woodland and mountains, no matter how high skyscrapers tower round about.—Bertha H. Smith in Country-side Magazine.

Thoroughly Disinfected.

In the days when the Manchu dynasty was tottering two students cut off some of their fingers as a protest to the government's delay in granting a parliament. Such forms of protest are to the Chinese what writing a letter to the paper is to the Englishman. When these students were taken to the Union Medical college the doctors remonstrated with them for misusing their bodies and running the danger of infection as well.

"Oh, you needn't fear on that point," said these students. "We boiled the knife first."

Monster Coins.

It is understood that the largest gold coin in circulation is the gold "loof" of Anam, the French colony in eastern Asia. It is a flat round piece worth £55 English money. The next size to this unwieldy coin is the Japanese "obang," which weighs more than two and a half ounces and is about equal to ten English sovereigns.—London Opinion.

Napoleon's Custodian at St. Helena.

Sir Hudson Lowe, the man appointed by England to be the custodian of the emperor, arrived at St. Helena on April 14, 1816. His appearance was not prepossessing. He was extraordinarily thin, with a stiff carriage. He had a long, bony face, blotched with red and scanty hair of a dirty yellow color. His hollow eyes gleamed under thick, reddish eyebrows, but were furtive and restless, never looking straight at any one save by stealth.

"That is a bad man," declared Napoleon when he had seen him. "His eye as he examined me was like a hyena's caught in a trap."

He really resembled this horrid, sly animal in its walk as well as in hair and eyes. He never sat down when he was talking, but swung about hesitatingly and with abrupt jerks.—"With Napoleon at St. Helena."

Life's Little Tragedies.

A youth dashed into the florist's shop.

"There was something wrong about those red roses you sent the lady on Lincoln avenue," he declared.

"I'm sure they were sent," replied the florist. "I remember the order. You said you wanted the very cheapest ones, a dozen and a quarter. Here, Joe."

The new boy came forward.

"You-remember those roses you took to Lincoln avenue. Sure you got the address right?"

"Yes, sir. I took it off the bill for 'em, sir."

"Bring the bill here."

"I can't, sir. I put it in the box with the roses!"

racue pen even faintly to portray. The grand panorama reaches its climax in Mount McKinley, monarch of the North American continent. With its altitude of 20,460 feet it stands alone in lofty pride and is distinctly visible from the vessel notwithstanding the very great distance. This fact well establishes the quality of the clarified and invigorating atmosphere of this far north country.

The Thousand Islands with all their beauty would scarcely serve as a prelude to the surpassing grandeur and loveliness of the many thousand islands that adorn the 3,000 miles of Alaskan coast. The fiords of Norway, the farfamed glaciers of Switzerland, cannot compare with their counterparts to be found in Alaska in number, variety, size, color effect and all the qualities that give charm to these works of nature.—Hon. A. Barton Hepburn in Leslie's.

SECRET OF A FLOWER.

How Did the Trumpet Vine Discover the Bared Stump?

If some one advanced the theory that this plant had some unknown power of reasoning you would probably reply that "plants can't reason because they have no mind." You may change your opinion after you hear this story, related by Royal Dixon, who writes entertainingly about how near like human beings in their actions plants are.

The story is about a trumpet vine, the favorite of many an old fashioned garden. About twenty feet from where it grew was an old pine stump with the bark on. One day a fire was built about the foot of the stump, and the bark was burned off.

Immediately the trumpet vine sent forth a long trailer across the garden to the stump. It raised the tendrils, felt the smooth surface of the stump and started to climb. Before long the whole blackened surface was hidden beneath the leaves and blossoms of the new vine.

With the rough bark on the stump provided no surface for the clinging tendrils of the vine. After the fire destroyed the bark the vine found a place to climb.

How did the plant know that the fire had prepared the stump? We don't know. Ask the flower.

Cellini's Quick Cure.

Benvenuto Cellini when about to cast his famous statue of Perseus, now in the Loggia dei Lanzi at Florence, was taken with a sudden fever. In the midst of his suffering one of his workmen rushed into his sick chamber and exclaimed, "Oh, Benvenuto, your statue is spoiled, and there is no hope whatever of saving it!" Cellini said that when he heard this he gave a howl and leaped from his bed. Dressing hastily, he rushed to his furnace and found his metal "caked." He ordered dry oak wood and fired the furnace fiercely, working in a rain that was falling, stirred the channels and saved his metal. He continues the story thus: "After all was over I turned to a plate of salad on a bench there and ate with a hearty appetite and drank together with the whole crew. Afterward I retired to my bed, healthy and happy, for it was two hours before morning, and slept as sweetly as if I had never felt a touch of illness."

a handie to his name. This fact was well known to George IV. When Coke was chosen to head a deputation praying the king to dismiss from his person and council those advisers who by their conduct had proved themselves alike enemies to the throne and people George announced that he would get even with him. "If Coke of Norfolk enters my presence," he declared, "I swear I'll knight him." The threat was repeated to Coke, who rejoined, "If he dares such a thing I swear I'll break his sword." And, as the sturdy Norfolk squire was quite capable of doing this, George refrained from carrying out his threat.

Feet of the Chameleon.

In their tongue, their feet and their eyes chameleons differ remarkably from other lizards. Their feet, though possessing five toes, are divided into two grasping groups, looking like a hand in mittens, and only by close examination you perceive the presence of the two or the three opposing respectively, but so close together as to appear like one broad one. On the padded soles or palms of these grasping limbs you can feel and see the small—may one say—palp which enable them to grasp so firmly that it is difficult to detach a chameleon from its foothold. These clinging feet, together with their prehensile tail, enable them to sustain themselves on the branches in the strongest gale.

A Stubborn Husband.

A most interesting phenomenon is the stubborn husband. He is not a bad man. He is contrary, and he has to be managed. He is usually married to a clever little woman, who is constantly devising schemes to accomplish the things which make their joint lives a success.

He has no suspicion of this. If he had he would be so mad he could undoubtedly eat her. So all through life she goes on swinging a turnip ahead of his nose to make him go the same as though he were a balky mule. She is a cheery little body, and she chuckles in her sleeve when he is not by. The stubborn husband is as interesting as a bug.—London Standard.

Lore of the Clover.

Any one who carries about a four leaved clover will be lucky and will have the power of discovering ghosts or evil spirits. With it under the pillow the lover may insure dreams of the beloved one. A fragment in the shoe of a traveler insures a safe journey. The power of the four leaved shamrock for good is familiar to all from Lover's pretty and once popular song, the speaker in which pictures what she would do should she find the magic plant:

I would play the enchanter's part and scatter bliss around,
And not a tear or aching heart should in the world be found.

Tomb of Noah.

The tomb of Noah is supposed to lie in the small town of Nakhchevan, on the plain of Ararat. The burial place is at the side of the broken walls of an abandoned fortress in the midst of a vast plain which is literally covered with the remains of bygone glories.

DARING WHALERS.

Risks They Take When They Dive
With the Harpooned Animal.

Many of the Japanese whalers are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on either side, through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also,
trusting to the fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as that of the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the inflamed animal's tail. If the little Jap lets go it usually means his death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalers lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened mammal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of his departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words, "Joraku, joraku, joraku!" and on the third day after the mamma has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayers offered for the animal's future contentment of spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body, as though entering a mine shaft or gallery. It is a grewsome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalers.—

HOLD UP YOUR HEAD.

It Will Stimulate You Mentally as Well
as Physically.

In a letter to Robert Grimshaw of the New York university William Muldoon gives advice that it would be well for every man and woman, boy and girl in America to take to heart. He says:

"I was taught in early manhood not to throw my shoulders back, stick my chest out, draw my stomach in or hold my chin down like a goat preparing to butt, but to always try and touch some imaginary thing with the crown of my head. If one tries to do that—first understands how to try and then tries—he doesn't have to pay any attention to the rest of his physical being. That effort to touch something above him not with his forehead, but with the crown of his head, will keep every particle of his body in the position that nature intended it should be.

And as a boy I was advised to frequently back up against the wall and make the back of my head, my shoulders, hips, heels all press against the wall at the same time, and in that way get an idea of what was straight, or, in other words, how crooked I was becoming by drooping."

Both to young and old Mr. Muldoon's "hold your head up" suggestion is inspiring. Try it. The effect physically and mentally is immediate. When the head goes higher the impulse is to deeper breathing. A man finds more elasticity in his limbs. He steps out with more ease. There is more spring to his gait. He isn't a lumbering, shambling creature, but a man alive. With the elevation of the crown of the head
there seems to come clearer thinking,
a more buoyant feeling and a brighter outlook.—Commerce and Finance.

Open the Eyes Under Water.

Practice opening the eyes under water in swimming, for with favorable conditions there is much to be seen and enjoyed in the queer, ghostly light below. The ability to see when below the surface may some time prove of priceless value. It is one of the attributes of swimming, and it may be readily mastered. But do not open the eyes until well below. The closed lid is an ample protection when one is plunging from any height, and it should remain closed until the first swift downward rush is ended.—All Out-

Sizes of the Planets

An ingenious way of comparing the sizes of planets with the sun is suggested by a French scientific writer.
Let the earth, he says, be represented by a twenty franc piece; then Venus is 15 francs, Mars 2, Mercury 1, Uranus
280, Neptune 320, Saturn 1,840, Jupiter
6,800 and the sun 6,780,000.

The Red Cross Society

The following letter has been received which gives a full explanation of the first Lennox and Addington Motor Ambulance:

Queen's University,
Kingston, Oct. 3, '16

Mrs. Geo. A. Thompson,
Secretary Red Cross,
Napanee, Ont.

Dear Madam,—

In reply to your letter of September 30th, I beg to say that the Motor Ambulance, donated by the Red Cross workers of the county of Lennox and Addington to Queen's Hospital, was shipped from Montreal on November 19th, per S.S. Buendes, and arrived safely in England.

Someone in authority appropriated it there on the ground, first, that Queen's Hospital, according to new regulations, was not entitled to an ambulance, these being placed under the transport service, and secondly, that the scarcity of petrol did not warrant the use of any extra ambulances. Information has been refused as to its destination, but I have reason to think it went to France last January.

I might add that at the same time we sent three motor cycles, two donated by individuals, and the third purchased by the Faculty. These were all appropriated and information refused as to what was done with them. Boxes of supplies have been opened and certain contents removed and some boxes have disappeared entirely. As all these things are in control of the Government, from the time they are shipped from here, we can do nothing, after a protest, but accept the inevitable and continue to send more. No doubt your Society feel you have a grievance in not knowing the exact destination of the ambulance sent, but the Medical Faculty and the staff of the hospital have a greater one. Personally I have ceased to worry about irregularities, which relate only to material things. My anxiety and efforts are directed towards persuading those in authority to keep faith with officers and men who enlist under certain representations and for specific purposes, but who find themselves on reaching England held up indefinitely or diverted to other activities. However, even these things can be tolerated if only we win the war and soon.

I trust that the workers in Napanee and throughout the county will not be discouraged by any of these things. The other side of it comes to me in letters from the hospitals—if it were not for the things we send them, they could not look after the men as they do. Comfort is brought to many a wounded soldier as a direct result of what is done here. So keep on.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) J. C. CONNELL

The Napanee Red Cross feel sure that all contributors to the first Ambulance Fund are perfectly satisfied to have had the motor ambulance go where it was most needed, and where it could do the most good.

RE PRINCESS PATRICIA CANADIAN CONVALESCENT HOSPITAL.

Some time ago Colonel Marshall requested us to hold the funds raised for the second motor ambulance until his return from England where he was going to fully investigate the needs of the Red Cross Society.

On his return he informed us that the Executive Committee had decided to equip a new Canadian Convalescent Hospital at Ramsgate, England, to accommodate 1000 men, and that H. R. H. the Princess Patricia of Connaught had graciously permitted the hospital to be called after her. Colonel Marshall strongly advised us that instead of sending another motor ambulance to use the money to equip the operating room of the new hospital, the thousand beds having been already subscribed for by different Red Cross Branches in Canada.

On receipt of this letter the members of the Lennox and Addington Motor Ambulance Committee were communicated with and all replies approved of the undertaking; many Branches expressed their willingness to forward more money, if needed, while the Yarker Branch enclosed a check for $30 more, making their donation $100.00.

At our annual meeting on September 23rd the subject was fully discussed and it was decided to forward a check for $2,480 to Colonel Marshall, Toronto, to equip the operating room of the Princess Patricia Hospital, and a check for the full amount has been sent to headquarters.

A tablet will be placed over the door of the operating room bearing the following inscription: "This room is furnished by the Red Cross workers of the County of Lennox and Addington, Ontario, Canada."

Our Society once again thanks the Red Cross workers throughout the county for the generous donations which have enabled us to equip the operating room of this Canadian Hospital, and we feel sure that in so doing the money has been well spent.

Our work room will be open as usual all day Saturday. In the afternoon tea will be served.

SELBY

The Lennox School Fair on Sept. 22nd was largely attended. The exhibits were of superior qualities and reflected great credit on the scholars. There was a very small display of vegetables, owing to the dry season. There was also a dearth of judges. The two gentleman who had the task in hand seemed very proficient, and the writer did not fail to notice that they were experts on pies, cakes, etc. The Mission Band was very active in its endeavor to supply the people with many little necessities. The old folks seemed to enjoy the sports quite as well as the juveniles. The appetites of all were satiated by a generous lunch.
A large number of delegates of the Woman's Missionary Society, Napanee District, were entertained on Thursday last by the local auxiliary. The increased interest the women are taking in missionary work is quite evident. The organizer, Mrs. Madole, strove hard to impress the fact that lack of interest was due to lack of education along those lines, and urged the necessity of getting and reading the Society's periodicals, viz: Outlook, Palm Branch, Monthly Letters, Report, and Text Book.
Rev. C. W. DeMille, Napanee, attended the funeral of the late G. W. Valleau, and assisted in the service.
Mrs. Nellie Cook returned to Rochester, N.Y., on Thursday last.
Mr. and Mrs. F. Denison spent Sunday with his mother in Bath.
Mrs. A. Tumman is suffering from an attack of pleurisy.
Mrs. S. Martin, Mrs. Bates, and Mr. Karl Martin, Napanee, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Martin on Tuesday last.
Mrs. S. Boyd and family are moving into their new house, which is a very fine structure.
The decorators on the School Room of the Methodist church have changed its appearance very much.
Mr. and Mrs. Carman, Belleville, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Tummon.
We are pleased to state that Mr. E. McDonald's little daughter, who is suffering from an attack of appendicitis, is improving.
Rev. Cook is holding special services at Victoria appointment.
Rally Day in our Sunday School was a genuine rally, judging from the number of scholars, young, old, and middle aged, that filled the auditorium of the Methodist church. The delightful weather, the large congregation, the brief pointed addresses, the usual good singing, all combined to make the service both interesting and instructive.
Mr. Nesbit, Napanee, in his concise, comprehensive talk on the words "Life, Overcoming, Christ," endeavored to impress the value we should place on life. The need of overcoming our faults, and the necessity of having Christ abiding within us.
Rev. C. W. DeMille, pastor of Trinity church, Napanee, spoke from the text, "How Shall I go to My Father if the Lad be Not With Me." Parents duty is to start the lad right. If you are on the wrong road you'll never get to the right place. Get on the right road and keep on going until the goal is reached. Decision rests with ourselves.
A climax to the above programme was a solo by Mrs. E. B. Cooke, "De Massa of de Sheep for". Rarely, if ever, has a Selby congregation listened to a musical number so well re-

Kingston's population increased by 1,221 during the past year, and its assessment by $578,000, according to the report of Assessor W. S. Gordon, issued Monday afternoon. The population increase does not include soldiers or the families of soldiers temporarily living here. The population, which is given as 22,516 is the settled population. The assessment increase is very satisfactory, in view of the fact that there has been a big decrease in building during the past two years.
Although Kingston has given hundreds of its men to the Canadian and British Expeditionary Forces it con-

HOME IN ITS TRUE SENSE.

Each Must Help to Make It, but One Alone Can Mar It.

To say of the home which marriage
ought to create that it is "a man's kingdom, a child's paradise and a woman's world" is to blur its meaning.

The home is no one's kingdom, no one's paradise, no one's world. The only kingdom it resembles is the kingdom of heaven, because it is within
you. Home is dependent for its reality—and its reality is as deep as anything we know—upon a condition of spirit.

This indeed is embodied or at least shadowed forth in this or that physical symbol—the sheltering roof, the fireplace, the common table—but it is dependent on no one of these.

For Omar the symbol was the loaf,
the jug and the book; for Deirdre and Naisi it was the tent "as tidy as a beehive or a linnet's nest," or the open sky
"among the snipe and plover."

Home means love and companionship and mutual dependence, the spirit of common service and of common loyalty. It may be achieved by a husband and wife or by a family or by two friends or even by a single person who has the home feeling toward the world without.

To say that it is the woman's hardest task to make the home is to miss its most exquisite meaning. No one of the group can make the home, though any one can mar it. It must be made by all for the uses of all.

A Remarkable Shawl.

The empress of Russia was once presented with a shawl of a remarkable kind. It is contained in a box only a few inches square, in which it fits easily, yet when it is shaken out it is ten yards square. This notable gift was the work of some women weavers in Orenberg, southern Russia, by whom it was presented. The box containing it is of wood, with hinges, hoops and fastenings of beaten silver.

A War Horse.

A professor who had bought a shabby looking horse asked his coachman to try it. After the animal had been driven around the road a few times the professor asked Pat:

"What do you think of him?"
"Bedad, he'd make a fine war horse,"
said Pat.

"Why, how is that?" asked the professor.

"Because," said Pat, "he'd sooner die than run."—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

Another indication of the tremendous popular interest in what is going on in the trenches and another sign that the whole heart and mind of the people is centered unceasingly in Flanders and in France, have been supplied by the character and extent of the crowds flocking to hear Mr. Rowell tell of his experience at the front.

This week Mr. Rowell has spoken three times: at Massey Hall to the representatives of men at the front; at the Canadian Club to the business men of Toronto and at the banquet of the Trades and Labour Congress to the representatives of the working men of Canada. Mr. Rowell will now visit two or three places in the province continuing the story of what he saw during his visit to Great Britain and France.

The most remarkable of the meetings up to the present undoubtedly was the one in Massey Hall which was arranged by the Women's Emergency Corps to give relatives of Canadian soldiers a chance of hearing a message from them.

Two hours before the meeting began,
women were lined up on the street in front of the hall and a number of them who had brought their babies with them were sitting on the steps and on the curb of the street. During the meeting the immense hall was crowded beyond its capacity with an audience composed three-quarters of women, a large number of them with babies whom they could not leave at home.
There was a good deal of talking and crying by these babies during the meeting, but neither the speaker nor anyone else objected to this in the least—rather they welcomed it, for these little children belonged to Canadian fathers at the front and as such were the most welcome guests that could possibly come. The women eagerly listened to every word of the story of life in the trenches as Mr.
Rowell had an opportunity of viewing it during his four days' visit to the Canadian front.

Among other messages from the Canadians which Mr. Rowell brought back were these—"Take care of the wounded who come home" and "Send us more and more men as re-inforcements."

ORIGIN OF LAUGHTER.

Carrying the Analysis Back to the Lowly Prehistoric Clam.

Laughter is an involuntary physical reaction. Hughlings Jackson calls it "one of the innumerable epiphenomena to which man is subject." It is apparently a universal heritage, though certain causes may operate more powerfully upon one individual than upon another to produce it. In the little child whose sensibilities are uncomplicated by any mental experience unless they be racial ones the shock of delicate touch—tickling, as we call it—first causes laughter. Why?

The claim of our psychologist carries us a long leap backward to the most elemental form of animal life. Beyond the savage stands the monkey and dimly far beyond him the mollusk, whose only sense was that of touch. Picture this great-grandfather of living things lying motionless save for those nervous, fluttering, sensitive feelers extended to play the part of sight and hearing. A bit of seaweed bumps against them. A spasm racks the mollusk's whole being, crushing him into his shell until the surprise has abated; then the fact that no further attack follows brings relief.

This is the germ of the cause of our laughter spasm—a sudden shock, instantly followed by a feeling of relief. Only such shocks as were followed by relief became racial memories. Where relief did not follow the clam did not live to leave a heritage.—Burgess Johnson in Harper's Magazine.

WORK IS HEALTH.

Idleness Is Often the Cause of Human Disease and Decay.

Work is not the curse nor the affliction that some people think it is. When taken in proper doses it is the best of medicines. It is now being prescribed for many forms of invalidism, such as heart disease, Bright's disease, nervousness and particularly for insanity.

The lack of work is often the cause of many chronic maladies, and it is a wise physician who can determine when one needs work instead of rest and in prescribing the remedy produce

THIRST TAMES WILD BEASTS.

Savage Brutes Respect Each Other's Right to Drinking Water.

Just as one dog will respect another dog's bone so even the fiercest forest beasts have their unwritten laws and their little conventions.

One common idea which has found its way into scores of books of adventure is that the lion and tiger take advantage of the insistent call of thirst to get a supper—that is to say, they go down to the water pool, the only one for miles around, take a good drink themselves and then lie in wait for some gazelle or giraffe or ibex coming there for a like purpose in order to spring upon the poor creature while in the act of drinking and make a meal of it.

Yet this is a libelous estimate of wild beast character. The fact is that there is a sort of truce of the water hole in jungle and forest. As far as killing is concerned the drinking place is out of bounds. There is an invisible notice board on its banks which says, "Live and Let Live," and it is implicitly obeyed.

There is an order of precedence. The rhinoceros gets first drink. He is the Dreadnought of the forest jungle. Then comes that old ironclad the elephant.

When he has lowered the tide mark and made the water more like coffee than anything else the big pussy cats stroll down to quench their ardent tongues—the lions, the leopards in Africa, the tigers in India, the jaguars and pumas in South America.

Meanwhile the shy animals—the giraffes, deer, springbucks and even the buffaloes, although they are a match for a lion—stand in the background and wait till the carnivora have done. But the latter never prevent their approach to the water or waylay them on their retirement. And that is better manners—aye, and better morals—than many men show.—Pearson's.

INDIA'S FAMOUS ROAD.

It Was the World's Greatest Highway Before Rome Was Born.

Search where you will, you will find no highway in the whole world so romantic as the Grand Trunk road of India.

A stately avenue of three roads in one—the center of hard metal, the roads on each side ankle deep in silvery dust—fringed by double rows of trees it runs for 1,400 miles through the vast northern plain which skirts the Himalayas, from Calcutta to far Peshawur, which keeps sentinel at the gate of Afghanistan.

From horizon to horizon it stretches like a broad white ribbon, as seemingly straight as if traced by a gigantic ruler. And dotted along its entire length are hundreds of serais (wayside rest houses), each with its arched and turreted gateway, its spacious inclosure, in which humans share shelter with oxen, camels and goats, and its central well of sparkling water.

For 3,000 years the Himalayas have looked down on this road and seen it as they see it today. It was the world's greatest highway before Rome was cradled, when the aboriginal Indians drove their cattle over the very spot where the motorcar dashes today.

wise physician who can determine when one needs work instead of rest and in prescribing the remedy produce no unpleasant situations.

About the most unhealthful person, as well as the most unhappy and useless, is the person with nothing to do.

Work is a dispeller of fears. It is the exercise that is as essential to the body and mind as are food and air. It is only when work is carried to excess that it becomes injurious, as in the case with food, rest and all good things.

The ideal of a healthy, happy life is no longer a world where work is not necessary and life is one grand sweet song of idleness. Life is activity; in the broad sense it is work—work that produces and entails sacrifice. It is not less work that we need, but work in the right proportions and under the right conditions. Such work is health. —North Carolina Health Bulletin.

Ancient Egyptians.

The race or breed of the men who built the pyramids is and will probably remain an ethnological mystery. They were not white nor black, nor has it been possible clearly to identify them with the Turanian or Arab race. We simply do not know the kind of people they were. They were probably a mixture of many breeds.

Parrots of Mexico.

What the wild pigeon once was in point of numbers to the United States the parrot, of varying shades of color and all sizes, is to old Mexico. Flights of these birds frequently darken the midday sun in the hot country, and they become so tame around the camps of engineers that the birds are given individual names and soon become regular pets. Whenever the parrots desert the forest and alight on the ground in the open spaces of the jungle the natives recognize their actions as sure warning of an impending earthquake.

A Death Lure.

According to tradition, a legendary king of Scotland, Kenneth, to his death in a most novel way. Kenneth had slain a son and Fennella, who to be avenged, a famous silversmith constructed a death dealing statue. In its right hand the statue held a sword, and in the left hand a pure gold, both set with diamonds and other precious stones. To the king was to defy death, it was arranged that any one guilty of a crime would be immediately poisoned by poisoned arrows shot from the body of the statue. Invited to inspect the work, Fennella had hoped, he took the precious imitation fruit, and hand touched the apple he was killed by the arrows and died within a few minutes.

SOME GOOD REASONS

Ottawa, September 21st.—Recruiting is practically at a standstill in Canada and the Government professes to be at a loss to know the reason. Many reasons have been suggested by candid critics. Some of them follow.

Reason No. 1.—An impression has got abroad that the Government never intended to recruit five hundred thousand men anyway. Not long after Premier Borden made the announcement, some of the Government's most influential and wealthy friends declared that it couldn't be done without seriously weakening the manufacturing industries of the country, since which time the government has had cold feet on the subject. It is freely stated that the five hundred thousand was only a bluff, and that the Government sprung it to stop further bidding.

Reason No. 2.—The registration scheme is said to be another bluff. Up to date the Government has introduced no compulsory element into it. Men may register or not as they see fit. The Government has no idea of doing anything more than the September Morn Act—that is to say, shiver on the brink. The chief object of the registration scheme is apparently to mark time. Like the old maid who was once kissed, the Government "likes to talk about it," but that's about as far as it gets. The registration scheme is in the hands of a Toronto lawyer, who is now a member of the Headquarters Staff at Ottawa, having occupied this non-combatant position since the beginning of the war. The Captain was lifted over the heads of twenty-seven of his senior officers to take this soft snap, which nets him four thousand dollars a year. Promotion has been rapid. His father, once a Conservative senator, is dead now, but he still seems to be strong with the party.

Reason No. 3.—The rank and file are disgusted with the war scandals, the shell profiteers, the Yankee fuse contracts, Sir Sam's precious friend, Colonel John Wesley Allison, paper shoes, shoddy uniforms, the Ross rifle, spavined chargers, grafting members of Parliament, the procrastinating Davidson Commission and other matters too numerous to mention. What the average citizen of eligible age asks is, why should I go overseas to bleed for my country and let these brigands stay at home and bleed it?

Reason No. 4.—There are too many clear, bath-room tenor voice. Between the two he made a living. In 1902 he moved west and tried his hand as a farmer, but found it harder work than playing the organ and moved back again. He gave it a three year's trial, after which he decided that the only manual labor he wanted was the kind he found on the keyboard. The war found him still tickling the ivories. He was one of the first to spring to the colors. He made a good spring at that—landed as a captain, although he had never had a day's drill or taken the short course or done anything to qualify. However, as I said before, he knew the manual—of the pipe organ—and his Ottawa friends let it go at that.

Of course, the gallant captain had no intention of stiffening his joints and spoiling his touch in the trenches. His job was that of recruiting officer. He continued to play the organ on Sunday and played the type-writer in the armouries on week days. He made fairly good money, holding down both jobs.

In the spring of 1916 his regiment shifted overseas, but not the Captain. He couldn't be away from town and play the organ, so he stayed behind. He is still engaged in the good work of recruiting and playing the organ and intends so to remain. None of

to him playing the organ and that settles it. They can't get far enough away.

A story is told of the Captain that while on a recruiting errand in a certain village he took dinner at a private house—he is a great diner out—where he was much incensed at the conduct of the son of the house, who had also donned khaki, in sitting down before the captain got his legs under the mahogany. The rage of the captain at the nerve of a mere private in his own father's house beating him to the soup is said to have been terrific. Tschalkowsky's "1812" on the pipe organ could not have been worse.

let the brigands' stay at home and bleed it?

Reason No. 4—There are too many shining examples of safety first in the higher ranks of the militia to encourage others to risk their lives. Too many church parade heroes being made brigadier-generals, too many political colonels raising regiments for others to lead into the danger zone, too many recruiting colonels getting sick leave and chucking the job when their regiments are ordered abroad, too many chicken-hearted four-flushers in cocked hats putting up the excuse that their duty lies at home, too many honorary colonels who get no closer to the war than Piccadilly and the Strand—in short, too many slackers in high places drawing down big pay for taking care of their own hides.

Reason No. 5—Camp Borden. Another million dollars thrown to the birds. A sand blown, sun-scorched Hades where discipline can only be preserved by giving half the men week end leave turn about. As many as twenty thousand men have been absent from Camp Borden on four days' leave at one time. There are two thousand deserters. The camp is to be vacated by the middle of October, leaving it to the ravages of winter weather. The chances are that next spring will find it a desolate scene of rack and ruin. The only real purpose it seems to have served was the holding of a ceremonial parade, at which Major-General Sir Sam Hughes took the salute from thirty-thousand dust-choked soldiers for the benefit of the moving picture machine. These films are now being exhibited in England with a view to boosting Sir Sam, but the Government evidently considers it bad policy to show them here.

Reason No. 6—Scurvy treatment of the Duke of Connaught, who had promised to stay with us until the end of the war, but who felt constrained to leave because his valuable military knowledge and advice would have a better opportunity at home. His Royal Highness was so beleaguered and beset by Sir Sam's jealousy, so headed off in his good intentions that he came to be known as the Duke of Cannot. This bon mot is of Sir Sam's own making.

Reason No. 7—Great dissatisfaction is expressed at the Pension Board. This institution is not only bone-headed, but is afflicted almost beyond belief with the red tape worm. It seems to operate on the general principle that widowed mothers, bereaved wives and permanently disabled heroes should be kept out of their pensions as long as possible. Moreover, the pensions are scaled on the English plan—the officers get the big end—which does not apply well in a democratic country where Jack is as good as his master. As a matter of fact there are many Canadian soldiers in the ranks who have as good a social position in civil life, if not a better one, than the officers, who are put over them. There is a widespread feeling that the pensions should be equalized—that is to say the same disability should get the same pension, whether a colonel or a private suffers it.

Reason No. 8—The irresponsible character of certain of the recruiting officers. Instead of arguing this point out, let me cite an instance which will be recognized readily by people who live in Cobourg or theirabouts. I mention no names, but I look straight at him.

To that part of the country came somewhere about the year 1899 an

He is still engaged, in the good work of recruiting and playing the organ and intends so to remain. None of that nasty, stinking gunpowder for the Captain!

The captain is a good spender, and when he hasn't got it to spend he charges up. Like Mr. Micawber, he sometimes forgets to pay. Naturally this does not endear him to the community in which he does his recruiting. Judged by resules, it costs this country about one thousand dollars for every recruit the country gets. It's cheap at that, the Captain's Vere de Vere manner alone being worth the money. Intending recruits, who are not repelled by his blue-blooded hauteur, have only to listen

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

"He would rather have you satisfied," admitted Bozzam.

"Well, I ain't," announced Sledge. "We don't sell."

"Not at all?" asked Bozzam, revealing the secret worry under which he had labored ever since the meeting.

"Nix!" replied Sledge. "We keep 'em and build. Dig up for your stock."

Bozzam merely blinked. This was a blow so unexpected that he could Bozzam in astonishment.

"Slip me the good one," he begged. "I need a laugh worse than I ever needed a drink on the 4th of January."

"We've stung Moodson!" snorted Bozzam. "For that matter, we all get stung, but I'm willing to lose my end of it in order to see that inhuman ghoul get his."

Timbers grinned to his full capacity, which was much.

"I didn't know you hated Old Gloom as bad as I do. Where did he go to die?"

"Have a look," offered Bozzam, pointing to the frosted glass partition.

In a corner of one of the panes there was a little clear space made by the scaling of the glass, and to this Timbers applied his eye. Moodson's face had turned a sallow yellow and had taken on an expression as if he had just swallowed quinine, but beyond this he had not moved, and neither gentleman had said a word—Sledge, sitting in comfortable enjoyment, waiting, and Moodson suffering intense contraction of all his vital organs.

Timbers leaned against the woodwork to chuckle. Bozzam drew him kindly away.

"Let me look," he requested. "Besides, you're shaking the partition."

In quiet joy he watched the wordless duel within for a moment, and then he suddenly turned to the meek little stenographer, who was placidly reading, and asked her to call up Marley.

"What do you want with the fluff in this pathetic hour?" inquired Timbers.

"Hand him his," snickered Bozzam. "Why does anybody get fussy with Sledge? He turns one little trick and unwhiskers the whole bunch of us, clear down to the village heart-breaker."

"Fancy Bert?" guessed Timbers. "Where does that barber's pride come in?"

"I don't think son-in-law pulls off his amusement park, does he?" Bozzam reminded him, reaching for the telephone. "Hello, Marley!" he called. "I'm surprised to hear your voice."

"Why?" inquired Marley stiffly, being constitutionally opposed to anything in the nature of flippancy and being always severe with Bozzam for that very reason.

"Because you're dead," Bozzam informed him. "Hadden't you heard it yet?"

"I don't understand you," reproved Marley. "I'm very busy just now, Mr.

and the welfare and the purses of his admiring constituents, that vociferous choice of the people. State Senator Allerton, was discovered by Sledge in the act of serving the public interests by playing poker in the rooms of Assemblyman Buckley, and with these two conscientious patriots, deep also in the exercise of their duties to the commonwealth, were the very men Sledge wanted to see—Franchise Walters, who was heavy set, but not fat, and who looked like a prosperous shoe merchant, and old Pop Gresham, the red eyed administration wheelhorse from Pickering county, and Calvin T. Luther, the ministerial looking profanity expert, and Cap Diggleby, the avowed and professedly bitter enemy of Sledge, whose every white whisker was needed as a calendar for his many honorable scars of forensic battle.

It was Cap Diggleby who was the first to hail the visitor as he entered the door.

"Hello, malefactor of great wealth," he called. "Have you a spare queen of clubs about your person?"

"I'm shy on queens," confessed Sledge, looking down with indifference at the game he played so indifferently. "Buckley, I'm dry."

"Beat you to it, old man," replied Buckley easily. He was a spare person, with the neatly combed appearance of a dancing master, but with intensely clear eyes and deep creases in his cheeks. "I sent word to the bar as soon as the phone announced you. Your stein will be right up."

"Thanks!" grunted Sledge, and considerably fell to estimating the jackpot.

Allerton, a smooth featured man with a good forehead and a smiling eye, picked up the two cards which had been dealt him, compared them judiciously with the three he held, folded them together with minute care and tucked them neatly under the deck. Looking up, he caught the coldly disinterested eye of Sledge. Every man of the six at the table had tried that same thing, but Allerton was the only one who succeeded. Sledge, pausing to inspect carelessly the bountifully arranged sideboard, moved into the adjoining room. Allerton arose from the table.

"Deal me out for a couple of rounds," he suggested. "Buckley, watch my stack. There's twenty-three fifty in it, and Pop Gresham's pile is mighty low."

Pop Gresham took ten blues from Allerton's assortment and added them to his own.

"Charge me ten from your friend's treasury, Buckley," he chuckled, with a playfulness intended to conceal his real satisfaction.

"Well, what's new?" asked Allerton, closing the door carefully behind him and sitting on the edge of Buckley's bed.

"Street car business," returned Sledge.

"I see we have two companies down home," remarked Allerton. "Which one are you in?"

"New one. Seven hundred and fifty thousand."

"Whew!" whistled Allerton. "Any money involved?"

"All cash," Sledge told him. "On the level."

"You must have a good outlook."

"Dig up?" he faintly repeated.

"Two hundred thousand cash," Sledge rumbled. "I dug." He tossed Bozzam a receipt from Johnson, the secretary of the Ring City Rapid Transit company showing that Benjamin F. "The money's in the bank. Make good or let go."

Bozzam felt his circulation stopping. "We can't let go!" he blurted in acute pain.

"Sure not," said Sledge, lifting his heavy upper lip to snarl at him vindictively. "You cheap crooks thought you could double cross me. You bought stock in Bert Glider's name. You loaned Marley enough to buy control. Any way you fix it you lose."

Bozzam reflected over that statement carefully. He viewed it from every angle. He twisted and slanted it and turned it upside down to look at the bottom. It was a flawless statement, sound and solid in every particular, and he admired it.

"I believe everything they ever said about you," he acknowledged and laughed pleasantly. "Now, let's get down to cases, Sledge. How can we compromise this mess?"

"Nothing doing. No double crosser ever gets away from me."

"So I've been told," commented Bozzam, smiling with keen appreciation of some unhinted joke. "It seems to me this is now up to Moodson," and he touched a bell.

A girl entered.

"Send Mr. Moodson in, please," said Bozzam, and Sledge looked at his watch.

Mr. Moodson arrived and took a chair opposite Sledge and on the other side of Bozzam, his mouth so tightly closed that one wondered how he could induce himself to eat. He looked at his watch, but held the face toward him like a poker hand and dropped it stealthily back in his pocket, as if he feared that some one might get the time of day away from him.

"I've a queer little puzzle for you, Moodson," said Bozzam cheerfully. "Mr. Sledge has determined to make a bonafide company out of the Ring City Rapid Transit, and of course will not sell the franchises. He has put up his $750,000 and requests us to put on our $200,000 to complete the capitalization. He knows that you financed the drama at the recent stockholders' meeting; that you bought 1,000 shares of stock for $25,000 and loaned $50,000 on $200,000 worth of Marley's. Now, here is the case in a nutshell: If you put up the $200,000 to pay for the stock in this new company it will drive the other one out of business, and you can get half a cent a pound for your $55,000 worth of stock certificates in the old company. If you don't make good on this subscription you get exactly the same price for your old stock as you would if you did. Now, what is the answer, in view of the fact that Mr. Sledge is absolutely implacable and means to do us harm? I shall leave you gentlemen to discuss the question."

He left the two experts in silence, facing each other glumly across his desk, and went into the adjoining room, where he surprised the meek little stenographer by sinking on the arm of a bench and laughing noiselessly until he grew purple in the face.

Timbers came in, looking much distressed for a fat man, and surveyed

ing always severe with some- that very reason.

"Because you're dead," Bozzam informed him. "Hadh't you heard it yet?"

"I don't understand you," reproved Marley. "I'm very busy just now, Mr. Bozzam."

"What's the use?" laughed that gentleman. "Nothing you can do will save your scalp. Sledge has just decided not to sell those franchises at any price."

"I thought you were the duly authorized agent, empowered to act," protested Marley.

"I was as long as it was a phony company," explained Bozzam. "But Sledge has just played a low down trick on us."

"How could he? What has he done?"

"Put up his money. Made the company legitimate. He's going to build."

Marley surprised Bozzam.

"I had expected that," he calmly announced. "Suppose he does?"

"Oh, nothing," answered Bozzam, with a wondering glance at Timbers. "He'll just put you out of the business, that's all."

"I don't see how," insisted Marley, his voice now pompous again. "You must remember, Mr. Bozzam, that I am now in absolute control of the Ring City Street Railway company and can use to the advantage of the company and of myself, for the first time in my career, my training and ability in management. I fancy that I can protect myself, even against strenuous competition."

"Goodby, old friend," said Bozzam, in his tremolo. "You may not know what has happened to you, but I do, and I'll send you a bunch of lilies in the morning."

He turned from the telephone in numb amazement.

"He actually doesn't know he's hurt," he puzzled. "He's been president on his own vote just long enough to get enlargement of the coco. How's the quarrel?"

"Fierce!" grinned Timbers, turning from the peephole. "Sledge has just looked at his watch, and any minute now I expect to see Moodson move a toe."

"They're wonders, both of them," enjoyed Bozzam. "I'm still admiring how many of us second rate yeggs Sledge nailed to the wall with this one pin—Moodson and you and me, fancy Bert, and Marley and about a million poor lollups of stockholders."

"That stock would make good cigarette lighters," agreed Timbers. "If Moodson hurries, though, he can sell the shares he put in Glider's name."

"But he can hold the bag for the $50,000 he loaned Marley. I don't know how Sledge will do it, but he'll make that stock worth nothing a share and put a curse on whoever holds it."

"Hush!" warned Timbers. "I think Sledge is reaching for a cigar. No; it's only his watch. That's twice."

Bozzam crowded him away from the peephole.

Five minutes more passed into eternity, and the silent wonders still sat rooted in the selfsame spot; then Sledge suddenly got up and passed out of the door and went down to the depot and took the 2:30 train for the state capital.

CHAPTER XI.

Arranging a Little Protection For the People.

THAT sterling friend of the populace, that stalwart defender of the rights and the morals

"How!" whistled Allerton. "Any money involved?"

"All cash," Sledge told him. "On the level."

"You must have a good outlook," wondered Allerton.

"Naw!" repudiated Sledge. "It's rotten! No franchises."

"I thought you held easily salable ones, from what I saw in the papers," puzzled Allerton. "If you haven't, however, you can easily get them from the city council."

"They're no good," insisted Sledge. "Short terms."

"That's right," agreed Allerton, beginning to see the light. "Franchises in this state can be granted for twenty years and are renewable in ten year periods at the option of the city council. I suppose your new franchises are for twenty years."

"Uh-huh!" assented Sledge. "That's when the profits begin."

"For both the company and its official friends," smiled Allerton. "It's rather a good provision as far as the public is concerned, however. It gives the people a voice."

"Why?" demanded Sledge. "They only ride."

"And pay," amended Allerton. "We talked this over before at Waver's house and at your office. I think I called attention to the fact that the people were beginning to expect a consideration for such valuable property as franchises."

"They expect a private car for a nickel," claimed Sledge. "We need franchise legislation."

"It's a dangerous thing to tackle," objected Allerton. "The voters are beginning to have ideas about such things."

"That's why we have to work quick," Sledge informed him.

"What do you want?" asked Allerton. "Fifty year franchises—free."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Allerton. "Why, Sledge, the man who would propose that might just as well retire from politics forever."

"Sure!" agreed Sledge. The senator stopped, with a shock, and reflected.

"The street car interests in the state are large, that's a fact," he acknowledged.

"Great game," approved Sledge. "I want stock all over the state. You'd better invest."

"It might be attractive," considered the senator. "How much stock do you think I should secure?"

"Million."

Even the seasoned senator, used as he was to private and personal discussions involving comfortable figures, was startled at the sound of that word.

"That listens very cheerfully," he conceded. "Do you suggest that I—buy up—that amount of stock for myself in the various street car companies of the state or that myself and friends should club together for that amount?"

"Hundred thousand extra for them," responded Sledge with the promptness of a man who has done all his figuring beforehand.

Allerton spent some minutes in quiet thought.

"There's the legal business, too," Sledge reminded him.

"That's so," agreed Allerton. "An attorney who is also a large stockholder could control that clientele. Suppose I see Buckley about this? Send him in, will you?"

stretched his legs into the n where the senator, in deep awaited him.

Digglesby returned to the game by and by, and as he smiled cheerfully at Buckley who had been playing casino and pinochle with his poker making a mad havoc in chips in consequence, he drew a pair to his triplets and head off" with keen zest.

Digglesby gave no sign or Sledge, but nevertheless, other deal, Sledge arose from the table, and, without moving bones about it, walked dir the bedroom. Allerton was in a cushioned window sill, cigarette, and with his foot big leather rocker around in inviting position.

"The old veteran found a comfortably explained. "I tempted to railroad a bill of the granting of fifty year without remuneration it snowed under so quickly that er couldn't keep track of. There aren't ten men in the building who would dare g their constituents if they such a measure."

"Sure not," agreed Sledge let anybody do anything. Keep 'em from it."

"That's the idea," assented "Restrictive legislation. I are strong for that just now Digglesby's idea is to call bill for the protection of mu against the monopolistic pe street car companies."

"Great!" approved Sledge fierce if they get it. I do but I know it's against th lies."

"That's the talk," nodd "Restrictive legislation."

"He's dead," commented Sledge, with keen philosophy.

"Exactly," coincided Allerton, with a philosophy which, though unexpressed,
was still keener. "There's only one political post of any worth which would be open to him after the prejudiced public had its erroneous judgment permanently fixed."

"The senate," guessed Sledge.

"The United States senate," firmly repeated Allerton, looking Sledge square-

in which political opprobrium cannot reach a man."

Sledge studied long and carefully and made some painstaking readjustments.
In order to make a place for one man
he had to do considerable shifting on his political chessboard and eventually push a pawn off the edge.

"I'll see what can be done about that," he promised.

"Will Digglebsy fight the bill himself?"

"No; he'll put Bailey Cooper on the job," grinned Allerton. "This will be about the last time he can be used that way too. That young spellbinder is getting too wise. Digglebsy's almost afraid of him now."

"Can't we get him?" asked Sledge.

"No chance," regretted Allerton.
"He's too young yet."

"Don't risk him," warned Sledge.

"I don't think these men appreciate,
as I do, the need of controlling street car legislation," he complained. "Allerton's bill looks like a menace to all my interests, and I am a little bit surprised that Sledge, since his entrance into the game on a big scale, does not seem more concerned about it."

"It was Sledge who arranged to have these fellows come together," Bert reminded him.

"Yes," admitted Marley, "but he seemed to have such feeble ideas about what to do after he had them here.
It wasn't like his usual vigorous methods."

"Then he has something up his sleeve," decided Bert. "I wish that fellow would drop dead. I'm afraid of him."

"You've been talking to Molly," laughed her father.

"No; I've been talking to Sledge," denied Bert. "I had just as lief have bubbled an electric coffee percolator,

and at his left hand was a feather-comfortable supply of cigarettes. In front of him sat Ben Sledge.

"Hello, Marley," greeted the senator.
"You're just in time for coffee."

"Had mine hours ago," returned Marley, nodding his return to Sledge's grunt.

"Then it's time again," insisted the senator pleasantly, ringing for another cup. "Or would you prefer a cocktail?"

"A little of your exclusive rye. I think, if you insist on anything," accepted Marley, drawing a chair into the cozy little circle. "You're trying to save that rye or you would have of-

"No; only trying to promote sobrie-

After he gets through the real argument will begin, and anything anybody else says against it will sound flabby. After that we'll bury the bill in committee until there's something exciting in the house, split in the fifty year franchise amendment and pass the thing some rainy afternoon when nobody's in the house but invited friends."

"How long will it take?" inquired Sledge.

"About as long as it will take you to round up and organize the best paying street car corporations in the state."

Sledge looked out of the window in silence which seemed almost moody.

"So long," he said, and left by way of the hall.

Meanwhile Bozzam and Timbers were having their troubles. Two big, husky men who looked as if they might be primary leaders jostled them one day and told them they had better leave town. When they protested mildly the huskies snarled and finally gave them twenty-four hours to pack up. They packed.

CHAPTER XII.

A Friendly Chat on the Peaceful Sabbath.

MARLEY, as president of the Ring City Street Railway company and as chairman of the impromptu convention of street car magnates, was so full of business that he felt stuffed like a sausage. To his mind the fund they had raised to fight Allerton's iniquitous legislation was woefully inadequate, and the men who should have been most interested were strangely optimistic. He suggested to several of them that they appoint a committee to see Allerton and arrange some sort of compromise, but here again he found an unexpected lukewarmness. Nobody seemed to think that Allerton could be "reached," and as a matter of fact every time he broached that subject he found his fellow magnates evasive. The newspapers need not have blazed so much about the probable corruption fund, because there positively was none. The subscription secured was only for the conduct of a publicity campaign and to pay for the services of a perfectly legitimate lobbyist, who would explain the reasonable rights of the street car men.

On Saturday morning the visitors all went home, looking fagged about the eyes, without having done much more than pass some frothy resolutions and raise the feeble fund referred to and investigate by electric light whatever the keys of the city would unlock; and President Marley, staggering under the burden of his position, was very much worried.

He confided his fears to his future son-in-law after he had seen the last tired, hard working magnate on a train headed for home and remorse.

with me. If I can find a buyer for it I'm going to unload my stock in that amusement park while the public still thinks it will be built."

Marley frowned his crushing displeasure.

"You are expressing very small confidence in me," he reproved. "I don't see why your nervousness about Sledge should extend to an operation which depends on my judgment alone. The Ridgewood avenue extension is to be built as fast as it can be pushed through. I have already ordered the rails, the franchise cannot be disputed, and even if Sledge were to parallel the Ridgewood avenue line it would only bring more patronage to your park."

"Not mine," corrected Bert hastily. "I'll get my money out of it as quick as I can, and I'll put that money where Sledge can't reach it."

"You're scared blue," charged Marley contemptuously. "How did you come to get tangled up with Sledge?"

"I met him down at the city hall. He was wearing one of his fool red roses, and I think he saw me looking at it. Perhaps I did grin. At any rate, he stopped and asked me when I was to be married to Molly."

"What did you tell him?"

"Christmas, Molly, yesterday afternoon, warned me not to tell any one, and particularly Sledge, that it is to be Thanksgiving."

"What did he say that scared you so?"

"Nothing," confessed Bert. "He only smiled. I felt as if I had been in a cold rain."

"Same smile Molly described," Marley laughed, though he was quite out of patience. "I cannot understand Molly's taking a whinziest fright based on nothing, but I didn't expect it of you, Bert. I have myself found Sledge to be rather decent in the last few days, and I am only annoyed because he does not seem to see the necessity of using his influence with Allerton to stop this street railway bill. I think I shall see Allerton myself tomorrow. He comes home every Saturday night."

Pursuant to that happy idea, the president drove out to Allerton's house the next morning and found the senator in the luxury of pajamas, easy slippers and lounging robe amid an extravagant confusion of Sunday papers. At

as my rival and competitor here."

"What's that?" asked Allerton, with a glance at Sledge.

"To find out what the dickens you mean by that infamous street railway bill of which you are the disreputable parent."

Allerton gazed at him blankly for a moment and again glanced quizzically at Sledge. There was a low rumble down in Sledge's throat, but neither his face nor his eyes betrayed any sentiment or emotion whatsoever.

"I mean to protect the honest workingman, to save our houses and fire-sides and add honor and glory to the American flag," responded Allerton solemnly.

Marley accepted that merry quip with the courteous chuckle which it deserved.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Any city woman who is determined to live in the country and all farm housekeepers who wish to build up a retail trade for fine products should make butter. This is a much neglected branch of modern farming, but it is one that belongs in every scheme of mixed husbandry.

The high prices of butter today are not phenomenal. Looking back over

To the many farm housewives who wish to engage in this branch of business I have no hesitation in offering words of encouragement. A fair type of dairy cow will earn from $150 to $300 a year in the production of butter. This is practical farming, for a herd of cattle will keep up the fertility of land besides earning a splendid income for the family. Of course there is about as much to be made in selling the cream if one happens to secure customers who will pay top notch rates, but everybody cannot make a specialty of cream to the neglect of other things. One of the reasons why a great many farmers can make it pay to produce butter is that it does not require the quick marketing that is necessary in handling cream. With a good collar and by using a little tea in

OILING FARM MACHINERY.

"A full oil can on every machine" should be the farmer's slogan. It is a good slogan, too, in that it stands for good lubrication of farm implements. A great deal of wear could be prevented by more frequent oiling or some method of insuring that every bearing would be kept well lubricated. Besides, machines which are kept well oiled give more satisfactory service than those which are allowed to run "dry." An excellent tendency of manufacturers now is to use a greater number of compression grease cups for hard oil. These are especially valuable on machines that must operate in dust, because they eliminate the open air holes.—Ohio Station.

POTATO CULTIVATION.

Should Be Constant, According to Sheldon W. Funk.

An essential for success with potatoes is constant cultivation, according to Sheldon W. Funk, farm adviser of the department of agriculture. Concerning cultivation, Mr. Funk says:

"We now come to the problem of constant cultivation, which means that the potato field should be cultivated properly at least every ten days and, better still, every week as long as we can get through between the rows. That does not mean from the time the potatoes are planted, but beforehand as well. Remember that at no time can the field be as well cultivated as before the tubers are planted. Thorough preparation of the soil before planting is very important and should never be neglected.

"Between the time when the tubers are planted and when the stalks start coming through the ground I like to harrow them several times with the spike tooth harrow to form a dust mulch and destroy the small weeds as well. After they are up nicely we are then ready to begin our regular cultivation, either with the sulky or the single horse cultivator. Some seasons we have considerable rain at this time of the year, and we are not able to use the spike tooth harrow as frequently as necessary, with the result that when we start on that first cultivation the field is covered pretty thickly with small weeds. Unless we are very careful with these cultivators at this particular time some one will have to do some hoeing in the potato field, and that is one job that I detest. Be careful to put good wide teeth next to the row on your cultivator and then lay the soil from both sides on the row so that every weed is covered, regardless of how many potato stalks you cover. The potatoes will all come through this soil, but the weeds will be killed, and usually no hoeing is necessary.

"It is important to make the first or second cultivation pretty deep, but after that cultivate as shallow as possible. Our object is to retain a constant dust mulch so as to hold the moisture in the soil and prevent its escape by evaporation, but great damage can be subject that choice butter need never be sold at the ordinary level of prices. If a farm owner makes a specialty of nice produce and caters to family trade all the butter that can possibly be produced is eagerly snapped up at from 25 cents a pound in the summer to 40 or 50 cents a pound in the winter. Owners of fine herds of dairy cows who have built up a private trade get as much as $1 a pound for their entire output of butter the year through.

WOMEN OF CANADA.

Fort Coulonge, Quebec.—"I am happy to tell you that your medicine did me wonderful good. I was troubled with weakness and I tried wines and other things but received very little benefit. I was young at the time and knew very little about medicines till a lady friend came to me with a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I became strong and a year afterward had twins."—Mrs. J. Brady, Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

Thousands of women right here in Canada who are now blessed with robust health cannot understand why thousands of other women continue to worry and suffer when they can obtain for a trifling sum Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will surely and quickly banish all pain, distress and misery and restore the womanly health.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care of growing children are always to be envied. "Favorite Prescription" gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

A GREAT BOOK THAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE.

Over a million copies of the "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" are now in the hands of the people. It is a book that everyone should have and read in case of accident or sickness.

Send fifty cents (or stamps) for mailing charges to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and enclose this notice and you will receive by return mail, all charges and customs duty prepaid, this valuable book.

to produce butter is that it does not require the quick marketing that is necessary in handling cream. With a good cellar and by using a little ice in hot weather the butter output need not be marketed more than once a week, or even once a month if the place is just right for storing the product. This question of marketing has to be considered at the outset. Success or failure will turn on the skillful handling and marketing of a variety of farm supplies. Any number of capable farmers live several miles from their nearest railway station, and they have to produce articles that do not require quick selling. One of the best of these products is butter.

An intelligent woman who loves her farm life can succeed at butter making. The income from this branch depends on the number of well selected cows, the care with which these animals are fed and the close attention given to the handling of cream and the manufacture of butter. There has to be something of a system worked out, but this is not beyond the capacity of the average person. A dozen cows can be maintained, together with enough young stock to keep the herd properly balanced, on a farm of thirty to fifty acres. I know a number of such places in the Chicago district. In one case a man keeps more than thirty animals on thirty acres. Assuming that twelve cows are kept for butter production, the clear profits of the place should not run under $1,200 a year, and with extra good cows the amount will be higher. Persons taking up the dairy business in any form will be safe in starting with a number of cows that one man can milk and care for. Twelve is about all that can be handled in this way. If there are acres enough for more animals it may be good policy to keep two milkers, who will have time enough during the day to perform the other farm work. Neither here nor in any other article that I write do I favor a person specializing in one product. Nothing could be more ill advised. In cases where there is nothing but a dairy to bring an income an attack of disease may ruin the herd and waste a year's efforts. It is so with any single crop. Neither wheat nor corn can be depended on as an exclusive product. Ruination or at least serious difficulty will come to any owner who depends on one article of production. Diversity is the order of the day. And with this in view every energetic farm family may well consider branching out in a number of channels. While butter making may be a large feature in the program, there should be poultry, fruit, vegetables and other things to balance up the year's work and give a reasonably large income.

Hog Down Some Corn.

One acre of corn harvested by hogs will return a greater profit than an equal acre harvested in the usual way. At the Missouri experiment station an acre of corn hogged off produced more pork than an acre of corn harvested and fed to hogs in the customary way. It is not practicable to hog down the entire corn crop, but it is good practice to utilize a certain portion of the crop in this way.

ble. Our object is to retain a constant dust mulch so as to hold the moisture in the soil and prevent its escape by evaporation, but great damage can be done here by going too deep. The potato plant sends its feeding roots out through the soil between the rows very quickly, and if we are not extremely careful with our cultivators we cut off immense numbers of feeding roots and do more harm than good. I think it is far better not to cultivate at all than to cultivate deep in the middle of the growing season. We practice a level system of cultivation. Our potatoes are planted pretty deep, and therefore there is no tendency for them to work out of the soil."

Stretching Window Screens on Frames.

The screen wire is first fastened along one side with tacks, then this edge of the frame is placed against some support while it lies on the bench top or table. The screen is then stretched with the hammer head placed on the extending end of the screen and pressed down in the successive positions as shown. The screen will stay taut after removing the hammer, as the bend will hold it while the tacks are driven.

LITTLE FARM HELPS.

It is a good plan to locate cornercrops and hay stacks on high rolling ground, so that water will not settle toward them.

A swamp that is an eyesore and absolutely useless as it stands may be drained and converted into a permanent pond by scraping out the bottom and lining it with clay.

A patch of stony, unproductive ground can in a few years be converted into a joy for the youngsters by planting it to hickory trees.

Nothing adds so much to the comfort of everybody on the farm as dry, solid paths or walks running from the house to all of the outbuildings and connecting the latter.

If you do not have the energy to build a dipping tank for the hogs pour some coal oil over the pond where they wallow, and it will aid materially in disposing of the lice.

Contemporary Opinion of Beethoven.

When the First Trios and the First Symphony appeared the conservative critics declared that they were "the confused explosions of a talented young man's overweening conceit."

The Second Symphony was called a monster, a dragon wounded to death and unable to die, thrashing around with its tail in impotent rage! Later Von Weber declared of the sublime Seventh Symphony that "the extravagances of this genius have reached their ne plus ultra, and Beethoven is quite ripe for the madhouse!"—Dole in "Famous Composers."

Suggestions About How to Store
the Surplus.

CELERY VINEGAR RECIPE.

A Scientist Tells Us How to Dry Com-

Economy the Keynote.

Vegetables are a fruitful source of wastage. Most housewives look after cold vegetables when they have been cooked, but the care of them before cooking is quite a different matter.
Small scraps of vegetables are thrown away; sprays of sweet herbs wither and are spoiled; carrots and turnips shrivel and grow moldy in the vegetable basket. It is difficult to purchase the exact quantity required, but this is no reason why the surplus should be thrown away or be allowed to decay.
You may save it and also store up your home grown vegetables for winter use.

All surplus carrots, turnips and parsnips should be washed, scraped and cut into thin slice or cubes. Sprinkle the slices over a large dish, taking care that they are spread thinly. When the oven is empty after dinner slip the dish into it, leave the oven door open and the vegetables will dry slowly. The heat must not be strong enough to color them at all. Stir the vegetables every hour, and as the quantity on the dish shrinks add a few more slices, but do not allow the fresh pieces to touch the half dried ones. So soon as the slices dry they must be removed from the dish, allowed to cool and then be packed away in airtight tins.

These dried vegetables, if carefully prepared and stored, will last for a year or more, and will come in usefully when fresh vegetables are scarce or difficult to procure. They always are ready for soups and stews or can be boiled in the usual way.

Before boiling they should be soaked for a few hours unless you want to use them in soups or stews which will be boiled for a long time, when there is no need to soak them beforehand.
If a few extra bunches of carrots are bought when these vegetables are cheap and plentiful, a good supply can be made to last through the winter.

Celery tops, roots and the outside stalks are invariably thrown away, yet these make delicious flavorings for soups and stews and dry just as successfully as carrots. Celery vinegar is delicious for salads. Take celery roots and wash them very carefully, but do not peel off the skin. Cut them into pieces and pass through a mincer.
Put the minced root into a large, wide mouthed bottle, pour over it a quart of hot vinegar and add six small chillies; add any celery roots there may be from time to time, and make the vinegar very hot between each addition of celery. Leave for six weeks, then strain the whole through a fine sieve and bottle for future use.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

TYPHOID FEVER is a severe disease coming on with headache, rise of temperature, diarrhoea, and abdominal distention. It always occurs as the result of taking into one's stomach food or drink contaminated with the body discharges. These discharges may enter one's mouth in water which has been polluted with sewage containing typhoid germs, with milk or food to which the germs have been carried by flies, by dirty hands, by dirty water, etc., or by direct contact with a person ill of typhoid fever. It is also distributed by "carriers," that is by persons who, though immune to the disease themselves, carry the germs of the disease in their intestines and transmit it to others through the discharges reaching food, etc. "Typhoid Mary,"
the New York cook who gave the disease to a large number of people before she was locked up, is a typoid example of a typhoid carrier. People who have typhoid fever may carry the disease for a long time and be a source of danger to others, especially if they have anything to do with the preparation of food.

Typhoid fever is rather common about the farms especially if a single case has occurred in a neighborhood where there is any chance of the general water supply, such as a spring, stream, or lake, receiving the intestinal discharges of the sick person. A typical example of this occurred in connection with an outbreak of the disease at Plymouth, Pa., in 1885.
Plymouth is a mining town with a population at the time of the outbreak of about 8,000. Its water-supply was obtained from a mountain stream draining an almost uninhabited watershed, and the water for the town was impounded in a series of four impounding reservoirs. In January a man living up stream, who had spent his Christmas holidays in Philadelphia, became ill at his home. The excreta were not disinfected but were thrown either into the frozen creek or upon its snow-covered banks. In March there came a spring thaw and the accumulations of excreta were washed down the stream. Three weeks later there was an acute outbreak of typhoid fever in the little town. In some days as many as 100 cases occurred. One thousand and four cases were reported. There were, it is estimated, altogether 1,500 cases and the deaths numbered 114. The infection was most marked in those who used the town water supply, the epidemic being limited to the users of this water. Those who used well water escaped the disease. This epidemic of typhoid was studied and definitely traced to its source by competent observers, and is a marked example of the necessity of protection of public water supplies.

We are not exempt from such lessons in Ontario. The outbreak of typhoid in Ottawa in 1911 and again in 1913, and that of the town of Sarnia in 1911-12, all of which were proven to have occurred as the result of sewage-polluted water, have been sharp lessons in our own province, lessons unhappily which have not yet convinced the respective civic authorities of the necessity of adequate protection of their water-supplies.

In the majority of cases the well is the chief and usually the only source of water supply. It is in many cases a safe supply, especially if it is a deep or driven well and more particularly if it is well protected against surface drainage. But many farm wells are shallow with the curb made of unjointed timber or stone which allow of easy drainage to the well. The covering is often of loose boards through which surface impurities may easily run. The danger is slight unless the impurities contain, which they may easily do, the excreta of persons carelessly thrown upon the ground.
If the excreta comes from a person affected with typhoid the danger is imminent, and there is almost a certainty that users of the water will suffer from the disease. The moral is plain: PROTECT THE WELL!

Summer Diarrhoea kills a large number of babies every summer. It is preventable if care is taken with the babies' food. If at all severe call the doctor at once. In any case it is always safe to give a dose of the good old-fashioned castor oil. That is one of the mother remedies to be banked upon. If the diarrhoea is severe cut off all food, especially MILK, which is death to a baby with diarrhoea, but give boiled water in as large amounts as the baby would have of food. In older children give only water and gruel or dry toast. But get a doctor at once.

swered from time to time.

April 30 in 1789.

Although March 4 is the date set by law for the inauguration of our presi- dents, there was one occasion when the rule was not observed, for George Washington was inaugurated on April 20, 1789, instead of March 4.

When the constitution had been rati- fied by the requisite number of states the Continental congress by resolution of Sept. 13, 1788, set the first Wednes- day of the following March (March 4, 1789) as the "time for commencing pro- ceedings" under the new form of gov- ernment.

Owing to delays of various kinds, such as difficulties of travel, etc., mem- bers of the first congress were very slow to assemble in New York, and a quorum of both houses was not ob- tained until April 6. The counting of the electoral vote, the notification of Washington and his journey from Mount Vernon to New York took until April 23, and his inauguration was set gress for the inauguration of the new government, and so it came to an end on March 4, 1792, although it lacked nearly two months of the four years provided for by the constitution.

The Exclusive X Club.

One of the most exclusive of clubs was the X, whose last surviving mem- ber was Lord Avebury. It was found- ed by a little coterie of literary scien- tists, including Sir Joseph Hooker and Herbert Spencer, and, though intended to comprise ten members, never got beyond nine, because no tenth was found who came up to the two require- ments of mental caliber and intimacy with the other nine. Many names for the club were suggested and rejected before a member's wife proposed term- ing it after the unknown quantity X.— London Opinion.

In "The Outlaw" in the October number of Red and Gun Magazine which is now on the news-stands, H. C. Hadden gives some intimate details in the life of a family of wolves, which the writer observed at first hand, from the birth of the cubs up till the time when one of their number became a famous hunter and a destroyer of cattle on the ranch of a Western farmer. In "A Bull of Triple Creek" A. Ray Goldings gives a dramatic account of a fight between two bull moose, the human element being supplied by the two trappers and a woman, the wife of one of the trappers, who witnessed the encounter between the two rival bulls, and one of whom is narrowly rescued from death. The Light that Saved, Camp Magic, On the Trail of the Wounded Bull Moose, A Story of Eggs and Skins, and other articles besides the regular departments, constitute an interesting issue for the sportsmen whose thoughts at this time of year are turning to the opening of the big game season. Moscow Anniversary Services.

The Anniversary Services of the Moscow Methodist church will be held on Sunday, Oct. 8th, 1916. The sermons will be preached by the Rev. E. Farnsworth, Newburgh, in the morning at 11 o'clock; in the evening at 7.30. Special music will be furnished by the choir, assisted by outside talent. A special thank-offering is requested at these services. On Monday evening, October 9th, an old fashioned tea-meeting will be held, followed by the annual Thanksgiving Entertainment. W. D. Black, M.P.P., for Addington, will occupy the chair. Miss Valteau, of Kingston, and Mrs. Dunn, of Yarker, will render solos. Miss Bunner, of Yarker, will render readings. Rev. Kemp, of Enterprise; Rev. Farnsworth, and others will give addresses, and other members on the program. Admission to tea and concert, 25c.

Sudden Death.

Samuel T. McCay, a well known resident of Napanee, and for over thirty years a valued employee of the Beaver Office, died very suddenly on Tuesday. Mr. McCay went to work as usual on Monday morning and about ten o'clock was taken with severe pains in his bowels. He was taken home and the same evening was taken to Kingston General Hospital for an operation for peritonitis. The surgeons found him in very bad shape and with practically no hope of recovery. The remains were brought to Napanee and the funeral will take place from his mother's residence this (Friday) afternoon at 2 p. m. Besides his mother, who is over ninety years of age, he leaves three brothers, Mr. Mat. Carslyle, Boston; Mr. A. McCay, Alabama, and Mr. Wilkie McCay, Cobalt. All the brothers are home for the funeral.

Cash Poultry Dealer.

M. B. Mills, (near the swing bridge), is prepared to pay the highest price for all good fat dressed poultry, dry plucked. Also will buy live fowls and chickens, which must be starved before delivery. Sick or poor stuff not wanted. Scalded fowls or chickens bought at reduced prices. Do not wait for the uncertain prices of Turkey Day, but bring all your stuff in as soon as properly fit to kill, and save feeding too long. As I am in the business to stay, and am prepared to pay cash for all goods, my motto will be a satisfactory deal every time. Give me your trade and let us build up a reliable poultry business in Napanee and not risk the uncertain, disappointing and delayed returns from the commission houses. Deliver dressed poultry and turkeys Thursday and Friday mornings. Live fowls and chickens any week day. Orders for table poultry solicited. Phone 298. 43-d-p

Found Whiskey.

Malcolm McGregor, a deserter arrested in Napanee one day and placed in the corridor of for safe keeping until the officers were ready to take him to the Barracks. While nozing at the corridor, McGregor found a cupboard, and breaking it open a full bottle of whiskey. It had been confiscated by the police some previous prisoner. I drank enough of the whiskey myself sick and passed the bottle to some friends outside, who finished it. After McGregor started the train, the theft of the whiskey was discovered, and the chief of police at the station found McGregor at the station. He appeared before the magistrates and was remanded to jail for a few days.

A WELCOME HOME.

In honor of a returned soldier, Pte.
Bernice Grant McKitterick, of "C" Company, 80th Battalion, C.E.F.
The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Mc-Kitterick was the scene of a most happy event on the evening of Wednesday, September 27th, 1916, when the neighbors of the vicinity gathered to welcome back their juvenile friend, Bernice, from overseas. Having been in the army for ten months, and medically unfit for active service, is therefore practically discharged from further service. Attention being called, Rev. R. W. Irvine gave a very eloquent address of welcome, after which Bernice replied in a genial few well chosen words, thanking all for their very thoughtful consideration of him, and his gladness in being with them all again. The evening was spent in games and amusement, lunch being served. The pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, when all dispersed to their various homes, declaring, Bernice, "A Jolly Good Fellow."

THE LATE GEORGE W. VALLEAU.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 24th, another pioneer resident of the village of Selby, was called into that "Heavenly rest, from which no traveller ever returns," and his demise is regretted by his many old friends and neighbors. Mr. Valteau was a descendant of the French Huguenots, who left their native land to seek homes and freedom in America. His father, the late William Valteau, located on a farm west of the village, where he raised a large family, of which only one member is living today, viz.: William, who now resides in Saskatchewan. Deceased followed the occupation of harness-maker, and was a very industrious citizen. He leaves to mourn his loss, a family of seven children: Mrs. Gibson, Frontenac; Mrs. Cook, Miles and Davis, Rochester, N.Y.; Drum, Kingston;
Mrs. Hall, Napanee; and Mrs. Lucas, Selby. On Tuesday the remains were conveyed to the Methodist church, where sympathizing friends met to pay their last respects. Rev. E. B.
Cooke delivered a very appropriate sermon, using the words of the Psalmist: "Lord teach me to know my end and the measure of my days, what it is, that I may know how frail I am."
The body was interred in the Riverside Cemetery, Napanee.
